Abraham Lincoln said in his famous "Lost Speech" before the first Republican state convention in Illinois:

"There is one desire which is uppermost in the mind, one wish common to us all—to which no dissent will be made; and I counsel you earnestly to bury all resentment, to sink all personal feeling, make all things work to a common purpose in which we are united and agreed about, and which all present will agree is absolutely necessary."

Thomas Jefferson Said:

¶ The government shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned.

¶ First principles; a jealous care of the right of election by the people; absolute acquiescense in the decisions of the majority.

¶ Those who labor in the earth are the chosen people of God.

¶ Do not be frightened by the croakings of wealth against the ascendancy of the people. I am not among those who fear the people.

¶ Some men look at constitutions with sanctimonious reverence; but institutions must advance and keep pace with the times

ESTABLISHED 1862

The Start of the "New Party" of 1856

As the Progressive party sprang into existence in 1912 to meet the demand of the people for a "new party" standing cleanly and aggressively on the supreme issue of the day, exactly so sprang up the Republican party in the year 1856.

The first gatherings of the "new party" of half a century ago parallel the first gatherings of the "new party" of the present so closely as to make their history of vivid interest today. The first national Republican meeting was a conference at Pittsburg on February 22, 1856; the first national Republican convention took place in June of the same year at Philadelphia. Both were full of the spirit of militant protest that inspire Progressives today; both showed the same triumph over the troublous questions of ways and means.

The Pittsburg conference inevitably suggests the first Progressive national meeting at Orchestra Hall at the close of the recent Republican National convention on June 22, 1912. Of its first day's work Horace Greeley wired by "magnetic telegraph" to the New York Tribune: "The Republican Convention has completed its first day's session, and has accomplished much to cement former political differences and distinctions, and here to mark the inauguration of a national party based on the principle of Freedom. The gathering is very large and the enthusiasm unbounded. Men are acting in the most perfect harmony and with a unity of feeling seldom known to political assemblages of this magnitude. Its moral and political effect will be felt for the next quarter of a century."

From this conference issued a national convention call "To The People of the United States, without regard to past political differences or divisions." And in response, the first national Republican convention assembled at Philadelphia, June 17, 1856. It was called to order by the Hon. Edwin D. Morgan of New York, chairman of the provisional national committee, who named a temporary chairman. He had to do it. There was no one else in authority to "start things." Had he known that this innocent action was to give the excuse of "precedent" to the national committee's "steam roller" fifty-six years later, Mr. Morgan might have dodged the duty.

All through this first convention the creation of these precedents—steps then honorable and necessary to fulfilling the will of the delegates—throws curious light upon the usurpation of power by a later national committee to defeat the will of the delegates. It was necessary then, for instance, to appoint a national committee to take charge of the next convention; but not one of the earnest and conscientious pioneers could possibly forsee that this "hold over" title to office would be employed to force upon the convention of 1912 an unrepresentative majority.

There were real problems, too, for the credentials committee of 1856, but they were honestly settled. The basis of representation was three times the electoral vote of a state, but almost all the northern states sent far more than their legal number of delegates. New York sent 96 men to the convention; Pennsylvania, 81 and Ohio, 69. Altogether there were 565 delegates present.

Moved by the common determination to establish a new party that should stand free of the "cross lines" that divided the old parties, the delegates solved the difficulties of representation, of rules, and of platform. They united in giving the country a ringing declaration of principles, no plank in which was evasive or reactionary.

In the same spirit they proceeded to the nomination of their first presidential ticket. On the informal or "nominating ballot," John C. Fremont, of California, received 359 votes; John McLean, of Ohio, 190 votes; Charles Sumner, of Massachusetts, 2 votes; Nathaniel P. Banks, of Massachusetts, 1 vote, and William H. Seward, of New York, 1 vote. On the first formal ballot Fremont received all but 38 votes, and his nomination was enthusiastically made unanimous.

For vice president practically all the leaders in the convention were given complimentary votes. William L. Dayton of New Jersey stood highest on the informal ballot, with 253 votes Abraham Lincoln of Illinois was next with 110. For "harmony and union" Illinois withdrew the name of her "cherished favorite" and Dayton was unanimously nominated.

The ticket here named received a jubilant welcome all over the country. The "new party" which it headed was rejected by old line leaders like Rufus Choate, who held a social and political position exactly like that of Elihu Root, today. But its appeal went straight to the people. And when the votes were counted on November 1, it was found that this political fledgling had utterly destroyed one "old party" and allowed the election of the Democratic nominee only on a minority of the popular vote. The "new party" justified itself in the first test.

CONVENTION POSTAL STATION.

For the information of all concerned, the following circular is issued:

For the convenience of those attending the Convention a postal station will be established on the second floor of the Coliseum Annex, to be known as Convention Station, Chicago Postoffice.

This station will be open for the transaction of postal business between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. daily, except Sunday.

Mail will be received at and dispatched from this station hourly.

Stamps, newspaper wrappers and postal cards will be on sale.

Mail for dispatch may be deposited directly in this station, or, when more convenient, in the letter and package boxes established on the sidewalk in front of the building.

Mail may be called for at Convention Station by the addressees in person, or on their written requests it will be delivered to official convention messengers, who will make direct delivery on the floor of the convention.

Special delivery matter will be delivered to addresses in person at the Convention Station. Prompt service of receipt of such mail will be given through the official convention messenger. This mail will also be delivered to the messenger upon written request of addressees and the signing of the necessary receipt.

Registered mail should be addressed to the hotel or lodging of the addressee, and written order should be filed with the clerk or proprietor of the hotel or lodging, authorizing him to sign for any registered mail which may be expected.

Registered mail addressed to the Coliseum will be delivered in the same manner as special delivery mail.

After adjournment of the Convention for the day, any first-class mail then remaining undelivered will, on receipt of written request to that effect, be delivered to the addressee at any downtown hotel.

Circular matter will be held subject to call or delivery at Convention Station.

Members and Officials.—All mail for members of the Progressive National Committee and Convention Officials on the second floor of the Annex will be delivered at their offices hourly.

Addressees.—In order to secure the best results those in official attendance should promptly file their Chicago and home addresses at Convention Station.

Any mail remaining undelivered at the close of the Convention will be promptly forwarded to the home addresses of the addressees, provided such home addresses are filed with the station.

Inquiries and complaints concerning mail should be made or addressed to the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, in charge of Convention Station.

Telephone communication may be had with the main Postoffice direct, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. by calling Harrison 4700, local 150.

Those in charge will kindly extend every possible postal courtesy, and endeavor to afford a prompt and accurate service. The cordial co-operation of those interested is earnestly requested.

What the Newspapers Say:

Without doubt the most remarkable studies of animal life ever taken—he brings much first hand information regarding Alaska and Siberia. Dobbs proves himself both a venturesome sportsman and an expert photographer.
—Chicago Journal, July 4, 1912.

Time after time the spectators burst into applause either at the beauty of the scene—or because of the inherent human interest of the pictures.
—Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Feb. 7, '12.

The pictures are the most wonderful ever taken and it would be cheap at $5.00 or $10.00 to see them as an education, but all the time they are of startling interest better than the reality for they lack the cold and the blizzards.
—Albany Democrat, May 6, 1912.

The presentment is so unique, so peculiarly rare in film work, and so full of Educational advantages that it is a practical loss to anyone missing it.

One of the really meritorious shows of the 20th Century.
—Astoria Oregonian, April, 25, 1912.

More intensely interesting than a well acted drama for it is a drama and one of the most forceful dramas that occupies a part of the big stage.
—Tocoma Ledger, Dec. 14, 1911.

The most realistic series of moving pictures ever seen in this city, taking his spectators on an extensive trip though the land of ice and snow and showing them many rare and wonderful sights.
—Bulletin, Phila., Mar. 10, 1911.

Mr. Dobbs told of the land of the midnight sun; and the appreciation of the pictures displayed depicting the thrilling stories was evidenced by repeated applause.

Abraham Lincoln Said:

"IT is the Eternal Struggle between these two principals---Right and Wrong---throughout the world. They are the two principles that have stood face to face from the beginning of time, and will ever continue to struggle. The one is the common right of humanity, and the other the divine right of kings. It is the same principle in whatever shape it develops itself. It is the same spirit that says: 'You toil and work and earn bread and I'll eat it.' No matter in what shape it comes, whether from the mouth of a king who seeks to bestride the people of his own nation and live by the fruit of their labor, or from one race of men as an apology for enslaving another race, it is the same tyrannical principle."

Progressive Party

Text of Call for National Progressive Convention

Chicago, August 5, 1912

To the people of the United States, without regard to past differences, who, through repeated betrayals, realize that today the power of the crooked political bosses and of the privileged classes behind them is so strong in the two old party organizations that no helpful movement in the real interests of our country can come out of either;

Who believe that the time has come for a national progressive movement—a nationwide movement—on non-sectional lines, so that the people may be served in sincerity and truth by an organization unfettered by obligation to conflicting interests;

Who believe in the right and capacity of the people to rule themselves, and effectively to control all the agencies of their government, and who hold that only through social and industrial justice, thus secured, can honest property find permanent protection;

Who believe that government by the few tends to become, and has in fact become, government by the sordid influences that control the few;

Who believe that only through the movement proposed can we obtain in the nation and the several states the legislation demanded by the modern industrial evolution; legislature which shall favor honest business and yet control the great agencies of modern business so as to insure their being used in the interest of the whole people; legislation which shall promote prosperity and at the same time secure the better and more equitable diffusion of prosperity; legislation which shall promote economic well being of the honest farmer, wageworker, professional man and business man alike, but which shall at the same time strike in efficient fashion—and not pretend to strike—at the roots of privilege in the world of industry no less than in the world of politics;

Who believe that only this type of wise industrial evolution will avert industrial revolution;

Who believe that wholesome party government can come only if there is wholesome party management in a spirit of service to the whole country, and who hold that the commandment delivered at Sinai, "Thou Shalt Not Steal" applies to politics as well as to business;

To all in accord with these views a call is hereby issued by the provisional committee under the resolution of the mass meeting held in Chicago on June 22nd last, to send each state a number of delegates, whose votes in the convention shall count for as many votes as the state shall have senators and representatives in congress, to meet in convention at Chicago on the 5th day of August, 1912, for the purpose of nominating candidates to be supported for the positions of president and vice-president of the United States.

In five states in 1892 the electoral vote was divided: California gave 8 electoral votes for Cleveland and 1 for Harrison and Ohio gave 1 for Cleveland and 22 for Harrison; in Michigan, by the act of the legislature, each congressional district voted separately for an elector; in Oregon 1 of the 4 candidates for electors on the peoples' party ticket was also on the democratic ticket; in North Dakota 1 of the 2 people's party electors cast his vote for Cleveland, this causing the electoral vote of the state to be equally divided among Cleveland, Harrison and Weaver. In 1896 California gave 8 electoral votes to McKinley and 1 to Bryan; Kentucky gave 12 to McKinley and 1 to Bryan. In Maryland, in 1904, 7 of the presidential electors chosen were democrats and 1 republican. In Maryland, in 1908, the electoral vote was split, the democrats getting 6 and the republicans 1, but the highest republican elector received 605 votes more than the highest democratic elector.
